In international B-Format, a new novel from the author of the New York Times bestseller Girls in Trucks—a hilarious and moving novel about a prodigal daughter's quest to reckon with her father's long-ago, unsolved disappearance.

On one particularly disastrous day, Buzz Legare decides to make up for his follies by going for a quick jaunt in his johnboat. Telling no one, he walks down to the yacht club with his dog Sullivan and goes out at dusk. Two days later, Buzz's boat is found floating fourteen miles past the harbor jetty. No one has seen Buzz Legare since.

Twenty-one years later, his daughter Hannah has always been haunted by her father's disappearance: she's never believed for a minute that he is dead, and is sickened by the fact that her family has moved on. So when a series of unfortunate events sends Hannah home for two weeks, she soon starts to uncover his secrets. She begins asking everyone in Charleston about Buzz's last day: the dentist who treated him, Jean, his lover. In the end, only a family tragedy can bring the truth fully to light. Hannah at last finds the answers she is looking for, along with the knowledge that sometimes, lost is not the worst place to be.
