This is the first-hand and fast-paced account of Henry Paulson's experience as the Secretary of the Treasury and how he dealt with the greatest financial crisis confronting the world since the Great Depression. It will include his personal recollections and conversations with President Bush, President Obama, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke, current Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner, Rep. Barney Frank, and Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi. The book will provide a true historical narrative, written with great attention to accuracy, about the major decisions that were made during this time of great financial and emotional unrest. Paulson will also put forth the policies he believes need to be implemented to take us securely into the future.
